6. Listeners to foreign broadcasts in the Soviet Union included many Party members. A number listened to these broadcasts and covered up their real interest by claiming complete opposition to them, but [ ] they listened because they were not completely loyal to the regime. In East Germany [ ] every officer who lived alone listened to foreign broadcasts, as well as many who lived with other officers whom they could trust. The broadcasts of Radio Liberation [ ] on the 45 m. band between 1500 and 1530 hours, were quite effective. The fact that emigres ran this station contributed to this effectiveness [ ] When VOA and BBC used Russian emigre speakers, the same effect was achieved.
